

Nexa Bank - Account Guide

Section 1: Opening an Account

A customer can open a Nexa Bank account by completing the registration process and providing the required personal information. To apply for an account, the customer registers with their details, and the application is then reviewed by the bank before the account becomes active.

The information required to open an account may include:

- Full name
- Date of birth
- Address
- City
- Country
- Postcode
- Mobile number
- Email address

After the customer applies, the application is reviewed and given one of the following statuses:

PENDING

The application has been submitted and is waiting for review. The customer cannot yet use banking services.

APPROVED

The application has been approved. The account is created and the customer can access banking services.

REJECTED

The application was not approved, and no account is created.

Section 2: Account Status

Every customer account has a status that determines which banking operations are available to the customer.

APPROVED

The account is active and can be used normally. The customer has full access to banking services.

FROZEN

The account has been temporarily restricted. Some banking operations, such as sending or receiving money, may not be available until the account is unfrozen. Freezing does not delete the account or its history.

CLOSED

The account is permanently inactive and can no longer be used. A closed account cannot be reopened.

Section 3: Freezing an Account

A customer can temporarily freeze their own account. Freezing is used when a customer wants to pause activity on the account without closing it, for example if they suspect suspicious activity.

While an account is frozen, transactions such as credit and debit operations are not permitted. The account can be returned to normal use by unfreezing it.

Section 4: Unfreezing an Account

A customer can unfreeze an account that is currently frozen. Unfreezing restores the account to the APPROVED status, and normal banking operations become available again.

Section 5: Closing an Account

A customer can permanently close their account. Closing an account is a final action and requires the customer to provide a reason for the closure.

Once an account is closed, it can no longer be used for any banking operations, and the customer cannot reopen it. Customers should ensure any remaining balance is withdrawn before closing.

Section 6: Account Details

Once an eligible customer account is created, the customer receives the following details:

- Account number
- Sort code
- Account type

Section 7: Pending Accounts

A newly registered customer whose application has not yet been approved does not have an active account. Until the application is approved, the customer cannot perform banking operations and should wait for their registration to be reviewed.
